It's surprisingly easy to throw together a great-sounding podcast (not professional quality but good enough for short-run training).

11:44:43 From Noel Zykowski : Same - cost and usability of Adobe products...dont' have time for that

n Copilot on the web (copilot.microsoft.com):

- Look for the left sidebar — this is your main menu.
- If you don't see it, click the three horizontal lines (≡) in the top-left corner to open it.

In the Copilot Windows app:

- The menu button is usually in the top-left corner, also shown as ≡.
- You can also access settings by clicking your profile icon in the top-right.

In Copilot in Microsoft 365 apps (Outlook, Word, Teams, etc.):

- Look for a Copilot icon in the ribbon or toolbar.
- Clicking it opens the panel where you access Copilot features—this acts like the “menu.”

11:57:05 From Paul Golightly : OH -- give it limits! For example, no more than 250 words. ChatGPT especially loves to waste your time. I distribute prompts to learners and I give them prompts that say something like "your response should be no longer than the original input" so you get some variable length but still limit.
